Broadcast Networks Europe (BNE) is a trade association open for membership to operating companies of terrestrial broadcasting networks in Europe and adjacent areas. The association has a Brussels office and represents all major terrestrial network operators in Europe.

Mission and Objectives

Broadcast Networks Europe aims to:

- Provide a forum for information exchange and cooperation on topics of common interest between members to ensure that the economics of supply of terrestrial broadcasting remains attractive to the market over time.
- Sustain and nurture the long term market opportunity for the distribution of content and data via terrestrial broadcast networks by:
  - optimising terrestrial platform developments and leveraging European-wide economies of scale;
  - ensuring availability of spectrum for current services and to support future developments of the terrestrial platforms.
- Represent the commercial interests of Terrestrial Broadcast Network Operators with regard to policy development and regulatory intervention with European Institutions.

Activities

To fulfill its mission, Broadcast Networks Europe:

- Monitors developments in relevant areas, such as regulation and standardisation, as well as activities at the European and international level;
- Co-ordinates the views and interests of its members;
- Represents its members vis à vis the appropriate policy making bodies;
- Develops agreed policy positions and responds to consultations;
- Carries out specific assignments in working groups and task forces;
- Publishes reflections, recommendations, studies and reports (including facts and figures on the terrestrial broadcasting market and related information);
- Hosts events to foster discussion and knowledge sharing on issues of relevance to its members.
